text from Prof. Ian B: Histopathology of Autopsy:

Histopathology plays a vital role in autopsy investigations by providing detailed information about the structural changes and abnormalities in tissues. It aids in determining the cause of death, identifying underlying diseases, evaluating treatment effectiveness, and contributing to medical research. Histopathological examination allows pathologists to assess cellular changes, identify cancerous cells, detect infections, and understand the impact of injuries or trauma. However, with covid infections and covid genetic vaccination reactions, there is limited histopathology. If there are spike protein antigens without nucleocapsid antigens detected, then it is highly likely there was continued generation of spike protein by the injected mRNA material. With nucleocapsid, then its likely antigen due to infection. More studies required in this area.

Feasibility of Histopathology after One Month:

Ideally, histopathology should be performed as soon as possi
