Someone above said Rennick has been moved to an unwinnable position on the Liberal Senate ticket. If he is still on the ticket he can still win. He just needs to run a campaign to make sure people vote below the line and put him first in their Liberal National votes. That is how the first Aboriginal senate candidate, Neville Bonner, for the Liberals was elected in Qld in the 70s I think. He was put third, but topped the Liberal votes by people voting for him first. Later on the party put him on top of the list. Rennick could achieve the same miracle providing he is actually on the Liberal list.

Just in from Senator Alex Antic, succinctly pulling apart the Communications Legislation Amendment (Combatting Misinformation and Disinformation) Bill 2023. Let's call it the 'Misinformation Bill'.

Several months ago, under FOI laws, he uncovered an arrangement between the Dept of Home Affairs and social media companies, "whereby the Department would flag social media posts for removal if the bureaucrats deemed them to represent "misinformation" or "disinformation".

"In my view, this represented an utter scandal yet there was little to no interest from the mainstream media.

People are increasingly turning away from mainstream media for their news and information, and it seems the Labor government is displeased.

Although Labor tell us that the purpose of their Communications Legislation Amendment (Combatting Misinformation and Disinformation) Bill 2023 is to protect "the safety and wellbeing of Australians," it appears to be an attempt to reclaim the information ground lost to social media platforms.

Cont.

The Fact Sheet released by the government tells us that the Bill would give the Australian Communications and Media Authority (ACMA) the authority to “develop a code of practice covering measures to combat misinformation and disinformation on digital platforms, which the ACMA could register and enforce.”

By “enforce,” they mean that corporations, such as social media platforms, accused of sharing “misinformation” or “disinformation” could face penalties of up to $2.75 million, and individuals could be penalised with fines of up to $0.55 million.

The Fact Sheet states: “rules made under the Bill may require digital platform services to have systems and processes in place to address misinformation or disinformation that meets a threshold of being likely to cause or contribute to serious harm.”

Who defines what is mis or dis information? Who determines what is likely to cause “serious harm”?

One category of harm outlined in the Fact Sheet is, “Harm to the health of Australians.” ...

Cont. Would that include such misinformation, now acknowledged as fact, as lockdowns doing more harm than good, or pharmaceutical products being linked to myocarditis?

Another category is "Harm to the Australian environment." Will content that expresses scepticism about the Net Zero agenda be considered mis or dis information under the pretext of protecting us from climate change?

And, of course, harm includes "Hatred against a group in Australian society on the basis of ethnicity, nationality, race, gender, sexual orientation, age, religion or physical or mental disability."

Will saying that men shouldn't play women's sports, or defending traditional marriage, be considered "hate"?

20:16:11 From Sharon C to Everyone:

Cont. Conveniently for the major networks, ACMA's restrictions on mis and dis information would exclude "professional news content" (which essentially means television, which has its own code of conduct) and "content authorised by the Australian or a State, Territory or Local Government," or "content produced by or for an accredited education provider."

A healthy, functioning democracy requires freedom of speech, which means that ideas from across the ideological and political spectrum are discussed and debated with the hope that good arguments, guided by the light of truth, will win the day. However, words like harm, misinformation, and disinformation have been weaponised to shut down critics of the broader ideological agenda at work in western nations, with COVID being a prime example.

The Government is seeking feedback on this Bill until 6 August 2023, and I encourage you to have your say and let the Albanese Government know what you think at the link below:
