One of the state's most powerful unions has hit out at Queensland Health's (QH) decision to "fast-track" the repeal of its COVID-19 vaccination mandate, citing the psychological safety of its members.

Key points:

- Queensland Nurses and Midwives' Union says the vaccine mandate for Queensland Health workers is being lifted too soon..

19:18:55 From John & Ines To Everyone:

As you know, Queensland Health (QH) has proposed removing the requirement for employees to be vaccinated against COVID-19. This follows a decision by the Chief Health Officer (CHO), following ATAGI advice. The QNMU has always followed the most up-to-date health advice and accepted public health measures. The current advice from the CHO, including allowing unvaccinated health care workers to the workforce, reflects the fact that we have now moved from a pandemic to endemic phase, where risk of transmission is significantly lower thanks to high vaccination rates and herd immunity. QNMU Executive Council – which is our union's democratically elected decision-making body – has endorsed formal feedback to QH about its proposal. Our proposal outlines numerous concerns that we are calling on QH to address to our satisfaction prior to the vaccine mandate being removed, including that:

19:18:58 From Julie Parker To Everyone:

In all of these unexpected deaths, we can say to people that "one of the possibilities to explain this is vaccine injury". That is wholeheartedly true.

19:19:05 From Guy and Caroline To Everyone:

Agree Gerry B - close friend was an iron man triathlete nad needed a quad heart bypass

19:19:16 From John & Ines To Everyone:

QH provides recognition and acknowledgement of psychological and other distress experienced by health workers during the COVID-19 pandemic. Appropriate risk assessments for psychosocial hazards are undertaken at each HHS, with identified hazards to be acted upon to ensure compliance with Code of Practice for psychosocial hazards. HHSs provide, on commencement and annually, appropriate fit testing and training on donning and doffing PPE – and ensure availability and access to PPE. There is an ongoing education and awareness campaign for health workers on the advantages of vaccinations generally. Serious consideration is given to implementing vaccination incentives for health workers to encourage uptake of all recommended vaccinations.

19:19:22 From Ali To Everyone:

Reacted to "In all of these unex..." with 🙌

19:19:31 From John & Ines To Everyone:

he QNMU's focus is on your health and safety. The QNMU's focus has and always will be on members' safety and wellbeing – and the risks and stress faced by frontline workers during the pandemic cannot be understated. During the COVID-19 pandemic, frontline nurses and midwives experienced incredible hardships, including spending time away from their families and loved ones and working very long hours in often extremely challenging circumstances. It is thanks to nurses, midwives and other health workers who worked on the frontline throughout the biggest health crisis we have ever seen that Queensland avoided the worst-case scenario, which played out in many parts of the world. In short, your work saved lives.

19:19:34 From Charles V To Everyone:

Convoy ?

19:19:48 From John & Ines To Everyone:

We understand there will likely be mixed feelings regarding the potential removal of the vaccine mandate, given the extreme conditions experienced by those on the frontline during the pandemic. However, it is important to note that nothing has changed yet. We are currently in a consultation phase with QH to ensure that, if QH proceeds with removing the vaccine mandate, it is done in a proper, considered way that prioritises every health workers' health and safety – including your psychological and physical safety. What happens now?

19:20:15 From Sharon To Everyone:

Reacted to "1 man dies skiing --..." with 👍

19:20:16 From John & Ines To Everyone:

QH has received over 900 individual pieces of feedback, including the QNMU's submission. QH is required to consider this feedback in a meaningful way, which will take time. The QNMU is seeking that QH comply with relevant work health and safety regulation and the Managing the risk of psychosocial hazards at work Code of Practice in full prior to any change taking place. In particular, we have highlighted key areas the Code sets out as being potential psychosocial hazards, including exposure to trauma, poor workplace relations, interpersonal conflict and poor change management. There is a right way to do this, and it cannot happen overnight. The QNMU will continue to engage constructively with QH to ensure the right processes are followed and our above concerns are addressed. We will have more to say on this matter once the consultation phase has ended and more information is available.

Dear Charles, and Anthony,

Just in time for our FOAM chat, the ABC, with a message yesterday on my phone at 10:45 am, has announced that:

"The 'highly mutated' COVID variant BA.2.86 - known as Pirola - has landed in Australia.

By the specialist Reporting Team's Leonie Thorne. Posed 21 Sep 2023 at 5:48am AEST. (Yea they placed 21 in front of Sep.!)

Nicknamed after the 1082 Pirola asteroid.

A new COVID variant nicknamed "Pirola" has been detected in Australia after sparking a sped-up vaccination program in the United Kingdom.

Etc. Etc. Etc. Etcetera.

Kind regards,

Gerry

- Queensland Nurses and Midwives' Union says the vaccine mandate for Queensland Health workers is being lifted too soon

- Unvaccinated workers who resigned because of the mandate can return to work from next week

- QNMU says the department hasn't considered the psychosocial impacts removing the mandate will have on workers

QH announced on Thursday night its decision to lift the mandate from next week after a fortnight consultation period.

A COVID-19 vaccine mandate was introduced in September 2021 for QH workers unless an approved exemption was granted for medical or religious reasons, or exceptional circumstances.

Queensland Nurses and Midwives' Union (QNMU) secretary Kate Veach said it was "deeply concerned" the mandate was being lifted so soon.

In my view, the Referendum is not really about the question on the paper, but it is shaping up as a Protest Vote about what the Labor Govt has been doing, and this is why it will be a massive NO. Even Labor voters know they can protest with a NO without changing their sacrosanct stupid government. Rishi Sunak is showing in the UK that climate change costs mean a reverse in policy. The same is happening here with the protests about the powerlines and towers, especially those in the sea as well as a rebuke over high interest rates, high electricity and food costs. Even normal Labor voters are seeing that the way of protesting is to join the No voters in the referendum.

Heart Attacks and Vaccinations

With the chats this evening about heart attacks, and dropping off, I am very happy that most of my nine brothers have had very little of vaccinations throughout their lives (Eldest is Clem born 1943). None of this annual flu vaccine; almost none of travel vaccines. So, only one, Adrian, has passed, and not a heart attack.

20:05:53 From Gerard C To Everyone:

But, the former generation, our parents, uncles, especially the medical relatives, have dropped from heart, early; so how much did they have the then new vaccinations. For example, grandfather, Lowen Hardy, accountant, owner of 'Nareen' (later Malcolm Frasers), died of heart attack in 1926. His sons, my uncles, died of heart attacks: uncle Lowen, naval surgeon in 1952 died at about 36 years of age; then uncle Ward, an air force architect, died from heart in 1960; then uncle Clem, a WW2 squadron leader died in about 1963.

How much of these might have reflected vaccines earlier in life, and military vaccines, or fore-runners of covid vaccines?

Gerry.
