Vaccine maker AstraZeneca is facing multiple lawsuits over "defective" Covid-19 shots that allegedly caused severe brain injuries and, in extreme cases, death.

The company is set to defend dual test cases in London's high court that could have far-reaching implications for recipients of the vaccine, which was available in Australia between June 2021 to March 2023.

In the first landmark legal case, the Oxford-developed Covid vaccine was labelled "defective" as its "vastly overstated" efficacy was less than patients were entitled to expect under the Consumer Protection Act.
