All these figures “Only 1 in 500 has a problem” with this radiation? Probably the original figure was 1 with 5.00% having a problem, or say 1 in 20; then some-one with little knowledge of basic arithmetic decides to say 1 in 500 which is only 1/25th of the original stated risk of 1 or 20. Might not be the case, but just possibly. Gerry.

The 1 in 500 case (chemo needle went through my vein into my arm), is when the veins are traumatised by the chemo. The nurse was a senior educating nurse in Wollongong Hospital. The nurse administering the chemo had NEVER seen this incident in 10 years of giving chemo to cancer patients. As a result of this incident, I had to have a portacath inserted to finish the chemo in 2013. 1 permanent condition now is peripheral neuropathy - numbness in toes and fingers, like 'pins and needles'. But am a twice breast cancer survivor. I would never do chemo again.
