Friday 7th March 2025.

This morning, Channel 7 showed a fifty year old tree uprooted in a beer-garden. This is wind blowing but also water disturbing the 'foundations' of the tree roots.

Maybe the same might happen to some of the tall blocks of flats at Surfer's Paradise. This might solve the problem of the new View-Tax introduced by the Gold Coast city Council just a month ago.

Yes, this should remind you of the stupid Window Tax in England, where people then built with minimal windows and suffered vitamin D deficiency, or, I think, rickets.

Anyway, I suppose the bankers and finance people live in those high rise buildings, with views.

Gerry

From BOOM "Unfortunately, such a system allows the rich citizens who own real and financial assets first access to fresh new money created as bank loans. And they tend to use that fresh new money in asset price speculation which creates increased wealth disparities over time. This is why many (most ?) young adults in the West can now no longer afford to buy a home. And every year, it gets harder for them to do so. In economics, this is called The Cantillon Effect."
