I think there are too many independents (in some electorates) to achieve any real results - and Clive seems to be focusing on destroying the Liberal Party which is a problem in and of itself - given they are the only thing standing between us and another 3 years of a Labor government it's pretty depressing.

Replying to "district court can only have jurisdiction over the...":

The jurisdiction of the courts is determined by the kind of cases - while the main District Court is based in the capital city, many hearings are done in regional centre Magistrates Court.

So for criminal matters minor matters are heard in the Magistrates Court, serious offences in the District Court, and murders tend to be heard in the Supreme Court.

For civil matters the jurisdiction is based on value of the claim.

Some information on the senate candidate I am supporting - please remember him on election day...

Dr Christopher Neil has practiced medicine for 20 years, specialising in cardiology since 2008. Completing his PhD in Adelaide and undertaking post-doctoral research and a fellowship in the UK, he has been committed to clinical excellence in the care of patients with heart failure.

Returning to a specialist consultant post in his hometown of Melbourne, in 2013, he focused on developing improved systems of care for heart failure patients, whilst continuing to research in hospitals, mentor physicians in training and supervise PhD students.

His passion, however, has always been for his patients and when he saw their health impacted and their rights infringed, he stood against what he saw as unethical and unjustifiable mandates, resulting in his termination in October 2021. He was a co-founder of AMPS in 2021 and continues as the current President
