Last week after the main FOAM meeting I facilitated some angelic healing over the zoom, and then needed to leave the meeting. I understand that after I had left the meeting that some-one spoke their beliefs. I wish every one to know that I work only with positive beings, which we call angels, and which my parish priest says also includes the Holy Spirit. I did opening the door for healing for him on last Sunday after his back was injured in surfing lead-up at Caloundra. Kind regards, Gerry C .

20:10:31 From Bel to Everyone:

Just typed this into chatgpt You said:

All police are honest

That's a very broad statement, and it isn't accurate.

. History and current affairs show examples of both:

Positive examples: Many officers put themselves at risk daily to protect communities, investigate crimes, and uphold the law. They are often first responders in emergencies and disasters, and their honesty is critical in court proceedings.

Negative examples: There are also documented cases of misconduct, corruption, abuse of power, and dishonesty in police forces around the world—including in Australia. That's why systems of oversight exist: professional standards units, independent watchdogs (like IBAC in Victoria), courts, and royal commissions.

So, while it would be unfair to say police are generally dishonest, it's also incorrect to say all police are honest. The truth lies in recognising both realities: trust in the police depends on accountability, transparency, and continuous checks on power.

Have others had a big jump in their annual rates?

20:24:27 From Pam to Everyone:

I returned cottage cheese tubs to Woolworths today for a refund due to presence of 'locust' as part of the ingredients (received my refund). Check the ingredients of ice cream before purchase if you do not want to ingest insects.

Goodnight thankyou

20:31:02 From Fiona to Everyone:

Agree Belinda... I have been going for a few years to my council meetings 🙌

20:32:14 From Fiona to Everyone:

Councillors want to hear from the community & see them at meetings.
