2026-01-16 18:56:52 From Anthony to Everyone:

Australia has big bushfires. I think if more home owners and farmers used Biodynamic Farming at least their own homes and farms would have more moisture in their soils and this would help alleviate the danger from bushfires nearby. More moisture comes from the spraying of the Prepared BD500 mixture that BD farmers use. Ordinary chemical farmers often accuse BD farmers of stealing the rain as the BD farm always has more soil moisture than its neighbours. BD sprays build up the moisture in the humus part of the soil. I think it may be a good idea if the Prepared BD500 was also sprayed over forests once or twice a year, usually during rain or when rain is expected.

2026-01-16 18:57:00 From Anthony to Everyone:

It would improve the soil quality and water retention helping provide moisture in the soils, grasses and trees and help reduce the severity of bushfires. BD Farmers do have big stirring machines for making lots of BD Spray and could spray it from crop dusting aircraft. Ordinary people could adopt a few acres of forest they know and spray the BD500 using a hand sprayer to ensure contact with the ground or as close to as possible, say in Autumn and Spring. Soil and grasses would improve and the feral horses and deer would be fed properly and perhaps become good food sources (both pet food and some human foods) if harvested humanely, rather than the mass killings of feral horses being carried out in Victoria at present. Kangaroos and Koalas and other native animals will like the better quality leaves and grasses the Prepared BD500 will generate.
